Played through the entire game over a few hours with some breaks. As of 4\/11\/2019 it is fully beatable and the review that say it's not are either old or they just gave up.

My group had a blast playing, would strongly recommend either as a solo or as a small group party game just like an escape room experience would normally. We took turns with who was in the headset, but everyone got to participate in helping solve the clues.

Most of the puzzles were fairly fair and straightforward enough to figure out, but there are some that either really make you think, or find certain clues. The best advice to avoid frustration I can offer, is that when using the scanner, you have to be pretty close to the thing you're scanning. There were a few puzzles where we were sure we had scanned an entire room only to find that we were like an inch away from the wall\/object and missed it.

I believe only 1 of the puzzles we had no clue how to do and ended up brute forcing it by just guessing over and over again until we got the correct series of answers, everything else has an answer that can be found in the room.

1 Bug was found where we dropped an item and it fell through the world, and then we fell through the world with it and could see the game from underneath (but found the item!) the reload option didn't bring the item back up and we had to restart at the level selector to get it back.
